To My Fellow Online Course Creators,

insert professional picture of the "voice" of the letter here

When I started making my first online course, I really had no idea what I was doing. I had the ideas and skills necessary to create a course; I just didn't know how to get it out there. I knew I needed a website, but I'm definitely not a developer. I also knew I'd have to record videos, but I wasn't sure how to host them and get them uploaded to my website.

And then, probably the most overwhelming part was marketing the course. I knew this wasn't going to be like the field of dreams. If I built it, they weren't just going to come. I knew I needed to spread the word and get my message out to the world. Student's weren't going to just come to me; I needed to go to them.

But how in the world am I supposed to do that? There are companies, much bigger than me, with a lot more money than me, paying millions of dollars for the attention of their customers. How do I compete with that?

I was ready to quit before I even started. I almost resigned to the fact that the knowledge and information I had to share with the world was going to stay with me. If I was lucky, I'd be able to reach a few people in my hometown. That would be good enough, I guess...

Then, by pure coincidence, I found the answer I needed when I wasn't even looking for it. Since then, everything has changed. I've recorded my course, got it online, built a website, and I have all the marketing tools I need to be successful.

Now my knowledge is being spread all over the world! I'm so happy I was able to do this before I accepted defeat.

If you're where I was, there's good news. I didn't do anything special. I didn't wake up one morning more capable than I was the day before. All I did was find the tools I needed, all in one space, and got to work.

This truly is a case of if I can do it, so can you.

I'm a teacher at heart. I love spreading what I've learned over years of hard work to people who need it. I taught one on one for a while, but there's only so many hours in a day. I wanted to educate as many people as I could, and teaching people one at a time was not the best use of my time. And if I'm being honest, there's not much money in that either.

So I hopped online. I decided the best way to reach people was to get the knowledge out of my head and onto the internet. That way, I only have to "teach" one time, but I have the potential to reach thousands - millions - of people all at once.

This was when the problems started to mount. Do you know how many options there are online for EVERYTHING? I had to...

- Find hosting
- Pick a website builder
- Find an email marketing platform
- Figure out how to record and upload my course

- Organize my course on my website
- Build landing pages
- Figure out how to automate as much of this as possible

Don't get me wrong, a quick Google search will return MILLIONS of options for everything I needed. But how in the world am I supposed to choose? Once I choose, how do I know if my hosting will play nice with my website builder, or if I'll be able to automate anything?

I like to keep things simple. I didn't want to deal with 15 different programs with 20 different plugins just to run my course. I want everything in the same place working together properly, without the hassle of downloading and updating plugins.

And don't get me started on the price. Each of those services cost money, and the prices add up FAST.

Even still, I started building it little by little. It quickly became more work than it was worth. I was using more of my time, and spending a lot more money trying to get my course online than if I would just teach people one on one.

I was hemorrhaging money, spending more time with my computer than my family, and it was making me miserable. The passion for teaching was still there, but the flame was being smothered by the overwhelm I felt trying to get it online.

I was ready to give up. I was wasting my time and my money, and it wasn't worth it.

But then, mindlessly browsing the internet, I found EXACTLY what I needed. The answer to all of my questions. Finally, no more wasted time or money.

It was such a relief. I easily:

- Secured hosting
- Built my website
- Setup email marketing
- Recorded and uploaded my course videos
- Arranged my course on a ready-made template
- Created landing pages to advertise my course
- Automated the process

And I did it all in the same place! One username, one password, one price, no frustration, no headaches, and I saved so much time. It was as if the heavens opened up and gave me exactly what I needed.

And they didn't open up for just me. They opened up for everyone who wanted to do what I'm doing. Like the fitness coach who opened his first gym with the money, he made with Kajabi. Or the retired fire chief who uses the income from his online course to live life on the road. Anyone who wants to start an online course can use this and get results.

In this section we show proof. The goal here is to show people that it actually works and that they don't just have to take our word for it. Screenshots of someone's dashboard with high sales numbers, high revenue numbers, etc., will be great here. Not entirely necessary to the letter, but it would add to it

This section is for actual testimonials. The more emotional, the better. "I love this!" "I'll buy ANYTHING they sell!" "They changed my life!" That type of thing. With this section, we're letting them know it's okay to get excited about Kajabi because other people already are. I can find some online to put here if necessary. And again, not critical to the letter, but it helps

If it weren't for Kajabi, I would've accepted failure. I would've never made a dollar selling my course online.
